Sale of Ill. Packing Co. to August Luer and Herman Luer at Alton brought out interesting facts concerning ownership and title of property. Land located on Front, Alton and 2nd. Lots were originally part of section 14, Alton township and were platted by Rufus Easton, Jan. 1918, but survey was not named Alton. Christening of Alton followed later, and presumably named after brother of Rufus Easton. Owner became involved later on for land was sold at sheriff's sale. Property went through various hands and came into ownership of Jesse Walton, 1859. Ge. S. Meyers and James T. Drummond bought portion of property in 1866 and 2 other properties in 1872. Meyers and Drummond started manufacture of tobacco and laid foundation for fortunes. Property went through other transfers. Dausman and Drummond Tobacco Co. incorporated 1876 for $100,000 and changed name to Drummond Tobacco Co., 1879. Was acquired by Drummond-Randle Tobacco Co. in 1885, afterwards started as competitor of Drummond Tobacco Co. which had moved its plant to St. Louis. Litigation followed that involved question whether Drummond-Randle Co. could use name of Drummond on its labels. It was real fight in courts between J.T. Drummond on one side and Chas. H. Randle and John N. Drummond on other. John N. Drummond won suit, and Drummond-Randle Co. went out of business. Alton Packing & Refrigeration Co. purchased property in 1892, became Alton Packing Co. 1899; was succeeded by Ill. Packing Co. in 1906. August and Herman Luer bid in plant for $4,000 and named it Luer Packing Co., Apr. 28, 1911, p.1 c.1

E. K. Preuitt, living near Bethalto, member of one of Madison county's oldest families, writes that owing to his health he is unable to participate in Madison County Centennial celebration. Mrs. Preuitt's wife, also represents old time Madison county family, of Kirkpatrick's, her grandfather being brother of Frank Kirkpatrick, builder of the first house in Edwardsville. Mr. Preuitt gives following account of Indian raid on settlers in Spring of 1811, told to him by grandfather, who was one of early settlers in Madison county. Preuitts settled along bluffs where East Alton now stands. Geo. Moore settled on Wood river, on what is known as Gill place. They owned good band of horses; was early spring when horses were turned out to graze in river bottoms. Indians raided and stole all the horses. As soon as it was discovered, Solomon Preuitt, George Moore and others pursued to northern part of state arriving at Indian village. On nearing camp saw great commotion among Indians on sight of Whites who had French trader along who knew ways of Indians and told them that soon 2 Indians mounted on ponies would appear and if they meant peace, would present gun muzzles to the front. Indians allowed white men to enter camp with Frenchman as interpreter, camp residents said Winnebagoes, had passed through with horses. KAENDERS, Peter Paul (Rev. Fr.)

Age 67, one of founders of Venice Ill. and who for past 41 yrs. has been rector of St. Mark's Catholic church in Venice, died at noon yesterday at St. Elizabeth's hospital in Granite City. Fr. Kaenders, who was known as "Pioneer Priest of the American Bottoms" was renown author and versatile musician and linguist. His best known book was "Her Only Love." Fr. Kaenders came to this country from Germany where he had obtained degree of Dr. of Medicine. He settled permanently in Venice, after spending his first year in America in Mitchell, Ill. He supervised construction of brick church which is now used by St. Mark's parish. In 1911 purchased St. Elizabeth's hospital from Lutheran congregation and conducted institution until last Jan. when he sold it to order of Franciscan Sisters of Pittsburg, Pa. Fr. Kaenders was born in Germany; came to America to study and on June 29, 1880, was ordained priest by Rt. Rev. Bishop Baltes of St. Peter & Paul's Cathedral. After being an assistant at Cathedral for some time, was appointed pastor of church at Bethalto, Mitchell and Venice. He devoted his time later just to Venice. During his life in Venice, he built 2 churches, 2 parsonages, a school and Marquette hall., Sept. 22, 1921, p.9 c.3

Question before council: Who owns land along river front south of Front st. from Market to Henry? Ordinance passed by city council Nov. 23, 1891, gave company that constructed Alton bridge across Miss. river, right to this strip of land with exception of 100 ft. along river which was reserved for use of steamboat landings at any time. So far as known, no action was ever taken by city whereby city would get this strip back. Bridge ordinance shows that St. Clair, Madison & St. L. Bridge & R.R. Co. was given right to construct bridge and were given land referred to above on condition they would use it for their railroad tracks and for large Union passenger station; neither was built. Property was never turned back. Notice served on owners of bridge for restoration of property; upon failure for them to comply with their part of contract., Aug. 18, 1917, p.1 c.5

MR. LINCOLN AND THE REBEL CHIEF (Editorial) Following are 2 illustrative anecdotes of Lincoln's spirit of forbearance toward principal actors in the war. "One day about the close of war, word was brought that Jake Thomson was at Portland, Me. about to sail for England. Mr. Lincoln was washing his hands when Sec't. Stanton urged him to take immediate action to secure Mr. T.'s arrest. "Well," said the president "if Jake T. is satisfied with the issue of the war, I am. B- E-T-T-E-R let him s-l-i-d-e." "Such men should be punished to full extent of the law," said Mr. Stanton. "Why, if we don't punish leaders of the rebellion what shall be say to their followers?" "B-E-T-T-E-R let him slide, Stanton" said the president, laying aside his towel. Mr. S. went out evidently annoyed and Mr. Lincoln turning to Adm. Dahlgren, who was present said: "Dahl, that is one thing I don't intend to allow. When the war is over, I want it to stop and let both sides go to work and heal the wounds which Heaven knows are bad enough, but jogging and pulling at them is not the best way to heal sores." A similar story is told of Mr. Lincoln, relative to attempted escape of Jeff Davis. "An officer approached him for purpose of learning his wishes. As soon as Mr. Lincoln divined his purpose he proceeded to tell him a story which runs about as follows: "I remember" said the president "a noted temperance lecturer proceeding afoot on hot and dusty day to deliver temperance discourse. Being exceedingly thirsty, he stopped at a tavern, and called for glass of soda water. Keeper knew him and said in whisper, "This is a very hot day and you look very much used up. Shall I put in a stick?" 'If' said the lecturer, confidentially, 'a stick could be put in, unbeknown to me, I am not prepared to say that anybody would suffer by it.' "No" said L. "I cannot tell anyone to be a party of Jeff Davis' escape, but if he should contrive to quit the county unknown to me I*to say, that we would get along comfortably without him., Feb. 11, 1893, p.7 c.5

G.F. Long from Springfield, here witnessing Lincoln-Douglas debates celebration, who formerly lived in Alton, was boy, 13, with his father upon platform sitting on rail watching movements and expressions of A. Lincoln in his speech, mentally he said "he don't amount to much. Pretty soon Lincoln began to warm up, his face glowed and muscles of his neck and throat swelled up as whipcords when some great idea struck him; orator swung his arms outwardly and wildly, sometimes lurching forward as he expressed his intense ideas. On one of these occasions he came very near where boy was sitting and Frank moved to get out of his way. Lincoln glanced down and said "Never mind little boy, I won't step on you." As one of "Father Abraham's soldiers" a few years later, he was stepped on quite severely by minie rifle balls and bombs bursting in air, in wildest battle scenes in south and in last Sherman campaign at Bentonville, S.C., Oct. 16, 1908, p.1 c.7

LONG, G. F.

From Springfield, here witnessing Lincoln-Douglas debates celebration, who formerly lived in Alton, was boy, age 13, with his father upon platform sitting on rail watching movements and expressions of A.
Lincoln in his speech, mentally he said, "He don't amount to much." Pretty soon Lincoln began to warm up, his face glowed and muscles of his neck and throat swelled up as whip-cords when some great idea struck him; the orator swung his arms outwardly and wildly, sometimes lurching forward as he expressed his intense ideas. On one of these occasions he came very near where the boy was sitting and Frank moved to get out of his way. Lincoln glanced down at Frank and said, "Never mind, little boy, I won't step on you." As one of "Father Abraham's soldiers" a few years later he was stepped on quite severely by "Minie rifle balls and bombs bursting in air" in wildest battle scenes in south, and in last battle of Sherman's Campaign at Bentonville, N. C. See also: Lincoln, Abraham., Oct. 16, 1908

POSTSCRIPT. Lamentable Occurrence. "It is with deepest regret that we stop in order to state that, at a late hour last night, an attack was made by a large number of persons, on the warehouse of Messrs. Godfrey, Gilman & Co. for the purpose of destroying a press, intended for the revival of the "Alton Observer"; which shocking to relate, resulted in the death of two individuals; the Rev. E. P. Lovejoy, late of the "Observer" and a man named Bishop.
Seven others were wounded, 2 severely, and 2 others slightly. We can add no more at this time, than that the assailants succeeded in effecting their object.", Nov. 8, 1837, p.3

J. M. Ruack is first member of mob to go on trial for destruction of "Alton Observer" press. Jury disagreed 11-1. Asked whether the court had jurisdiction in this case and finding statement negative, jury again withdrew and returned a verdict of guilty, but that under the indictment, could not be held as guilty. Indictment was committed on Aug. 21 and new organization of Alton was not affected until Sept. 2, 1837., Jan. 10, 1838, p.2 c.6

Communication of Thos. Dimmock to Mr. Isaac H. Kelley more than forty years ago, with a companion somewhat older than myself I sought & found, the grave of Elijah Parish Lovejoy. It then lay between two quite large oak trees, & was marked by a small pine board, on which were rudely carved the initials "E. P. L." Present city cemetery was then an open common. When it was laid out the trees & board dissappeared & main avenue from the gate passed directly over the grave - the location of which would have been hopelessly lost, but for the late William Brudon, Superintendent of the cemetery, who marked the spot by the fragments of lime stone of which very few knew the meaning. After being thus troden under foot by man & beast for several years, the late Charles W. Hunter had the remains removed where they now are, just outside his own family lot, but in ground owned by him.", Aug. 29, 1885, p.3 c.5

Sparks Milling Co. contribution to Ill. Centennial celebration, is bronze tablet erected on southwest corner of mill on riverfront marking spot where assassination occurred. Inscribed as follows: "This Tablet Marks the Scene of the Tragic Death at the Hands of A Pro-Slavery Mob on Nov. 7, 1837, of Elijah P. Lovejoy, who gave his life For Liberty of Thought, For Liberty of Speech, For Liberty of Press and For Liberty of Man. Placed in commemoration of his heroism by Sparks Milling Co." In addition company has erected on granite base and suitably inscribed remnant of old printing press which mob was seeking to destroy and which Lovejoy died to defend. Rusty main frame of old hand press on which "Alton Observer" was to be printed was dug up at Southwest corner of mill building a few years ago, 18 ft. under ground when excavation was being made for foundation of new scales.
